Sunderlal Bahuguna

He was born on January 9, 1927, near Tehri, Uttarakhand, British India. He was an Indian environmentalist and the leader of the Chipko movement. He fought for the preservation of forests in the Himalayas. In 1970, he first fought as a member of the Chipko movement and later spearheaded the anti-Tehri Dam movement from the 1980s to early 2004. We can say that he was one of the early environmentalists in India. As an environmental activist and a passionate defender of the Himalayan people and India's rivers, he also worked to improve the plight of the hill people, mainly working women. He was also associated with temperance movements and, earlier on, with struggles against casteist discrimination. He died on May 21, 2021, in Rishikesh, Uttarakhand, India.

Jane Goodall (World's foremost expert on chimpanzees)

Jane Goodall is one of the most famous environmentalists, particularly in the wildlife protection space. She embarks on projects that support the habitat conservation movement. Jane was out on the field at a time when there was heavy bias on women scientists embarking on fieldwork. Globally, people now know Jane as the world's foremost chimpanzee expert. Jane's passion led her to Gombe Stream National Park in Tanzania at age 26. There, she began to research chimpanzees. As a primatologist, Jane spent several years studying the behavior of endangered chimpanzees at Gombe Stream National Park. Through her studies, she highlighted human-like characteristics amongst this species. Her extensive studies have now become a crucial aspect of her legacy. In 1977, Jane established the Jane Goodall Institute. It is a global non-profit organization concerned with animal welfare and environmental conservation. It seeks to create a healthy and unified relationship between animals, humans, and the environment.

Gaylord Nelson (Politician and creator of Earth Day)

Gaylord Nelson was an American activist and politician who served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He was an instrumental figure in the passage of crucial environmental acts. During the 20th century, Gaylord was a prominent environmental activist highlighting environmental issues and fighting for social justice. Gaylord served as the governor of Wisconsin and represented the state in the U.S. Senate. As a governor, he held a vision that addressed the sustainable use of resources and environmental preservation. One of his most prominent contributions was the creation of the Outdoor Recreation Acquisition Program. The program sought to acquire lands maintained as wilderness areas and public parks.

George Washington

George Washington Carver was a world-famous agricultural scientist and experimenter. People knew, and still know, him for his contribution to developing new products from peanuts, soybeans, and sweet potatoes. George was one of the prominent scientists in the 20th century. His contribution to agriculture and the land led to birthing new ways to prevent soil depletion. He promoted soil rotation and contributed to the development of the agricultural economy in the southern region of the U.S. He encouraged local farmers to grow their crops as a way to provide food and improve their lives.

John Muir (The father of national parks)
 People popularly refer to John Muir as the father of national parks. He spent a large portion of his life fighting for forest conservation. Throughout his lifetime, he shared his love for the natural world and contributed to establishing national parks. Some of these parks include Yosemite National Park and Sequoia National Park in California. After nearly losing his eye due to an industrial accident, John left his career and became dedicated to nature.
